CAUSES DISTURBANCE

Lexington Woman Tells Contradictory Stories At City Mission and Resists Arrest.

Wednesday afternoon Mrs. William F. Kyle, of Lexington, created quite a bit of excitement on the streets of this city.

Mrs. Kyle and a small boy, who she said was her son, were sent to the City Mission after they had asked several people for help. When she arrived at the City Mission she was closely questioned by Mrs. Peddicord.

In several instances was caught in what seemed falsehoods.

After a thorough investigation of some of the stories the woman told, Mrs. Peddicord thought that the police should handle the case and started to take the woman to headquarters. At Second and Court streets Mrs. Kyle refused to go any further and attempted to get away. While attempting to hold the woman Mrs. Peddicord called to several men who were standing nearby to help her until she could call a policeman. Two of them talked with her and then walked away; the other did not even talk to her.

Councilman Everett finally came to Mrs. Peddicord's assistance and the woman, who had gotten away, was overtaken by a policeman and taken to Police headquarters, where her story was again told.

She claimed that she had come to this city to aid her mother, who was sick, and that finding that her mother had been sent to Lexington for treatment, bought tickets for that place. After getting on the train she said she had lost the tickets and was put off by the conductor.

All of this was proved to be false. Chief Mackey called the Lexington police over long distance and learned that the woman was a very bad character. Upon learning this it was decided to take her out of the city and she was sent to Lexington on the first train.
